REPORTS TO PROPOSE NEW NAZI TROOPS

Report Nation Will Enter War If Troops Cross Over Bulgaria

Turkish Attitude Is Believed Responsible For Germans Attempting War Of Nerves Throughout Balkans

By WALLACE CARROLL

LONDON, Jan. 7.—(BUP)—Balkan sources said in London today that Turkey told Bulgaria six weeks ago that she would enter the war at the side of Great Britain if German troops tried to cross Bulgaria.

Here Today

JAMES S. DUNCAN, acting deputy minister for air, visiting Edmonton Tuesday, says that the Joint Air Training Plan, with the assistance of American industry, would tip the scales in favor of Great Britain.

TRAINING OF AIRMEN MEANS BRITISH WIN

Will Tip Scales In Favor Of Britain, Deputy Minister Says

The output of fighting aircraft from the Joint Air Training Plan, coupled with the assistance of American industries in supply of aircraft and arms, would tip the scales in favor of Great Britain in the war, it was stated here Tuesday by James S. Duncan, acting deputy minister for air.

Mr. Duncan, who has wartime leave from his position as vice president and general manager of Massey-Harris Co. Ltd., arrived in the city Tuesday morning and is spending the day inspecting the air training schools here and others connected with the air training plan. He is accompanied by H. G. Colebrook, a member of the air department who is a director of the Robert Simpson Co. and Squadron Leader H. R. Stuart, R.C.A.F., military secretary.

NO PILOT SHORTAGE

"There has never been an actual shortage of pilots, although they have been overworked at times," Mr. Duncan said. "The shortage has been in aircraft but now we are getting more planes from the United States and elsewhere, and we expect the output of pilots and other air crew from the training plan to overtake in with the supply of planes."

SUPERIOR QUALITY

He stated that superiority in numbers was not the chief aim in the air force. "We are aiming at superiority in quality, both of air craft and trainees. I understand

Today's War Moves

By J. W. E. MASON
British and German reports exclusive to Edmonton Bulletin
BRITISH estimates that it probably will open on Thursday, February 20, the first session of the present North African campaign total 94,000, coupled with the great quantity of weapons and stores captured, indicate that the backbone of the Italian's Libyan army has been broken beyond repair. British casualties, placed at approximately 2,000, further show that the Imperial fighting force retains all its original driving power, heavily augmented by the advanced Italian supply.

With British ships operating along the Italian coast able to bring in more supplies, it was being probable that the offensive against Tobruk offers a promise of more force against the attack on Bardia. Indeed, the Tobruk operations will be easier if the British can capture the port to concentrate much of the completed strength at that port.

The handicap of not mechanized units is especially serious for Graziani's retreating forces. In no remarkably frank report from the military planes of the present operations made public in Italy on December 22, Graziani's army had lacked only the essential arm of modern offensive drive.

Now Bremen Knows What It's Like

For months Bremen, where some of the most important docks and shipbuilding yards of Germany are located, has been the target for British bombs from the air. Following the incendiary raid on the City of London, the British sent over many heavy bombing planes and subjected Bremen to one of the heaviest attacks of the war to date. High explosive and incendiary bombs were used and "highly successful" results achieved. It is to be noted that in its reply to the Nazis, the R.A.F. selected a burning center of genuine military objectives, not an industrial area such as the City of London. Above is a view of Bremen, showing some of its docks.

94,000 Fascist Troops Are Rendered Ineffective In North Africa Fighting

LONDON, Jan. 7.—(CP)—Official quarters estimated today the British army of the Nile has rendered 94,000 Italian troops "ineffective" in fighting in North Africa since Dec. 9.

These figures include at least 20,000 prisoners, plus wounded and dead.

In addition, the British forces captured huge quantities of war material.

British mechanized units, the source said, are now in contact with the outer defenses of Tobruk. Italian forces stretched some 30 miles from the Egyptian border.

Among the Italian formations listed as smashed in the British offensive were the 62nd, 63rd and 64th Metropolitan divisions — the regular army's 1st and 2nd Light Divisions, the 1st and 2nd Libyan divisions and the Maeli mechanized group.

There are 13,000 men and officers in a regular Italian division.

GREEK WARSHIPS
SHELL VALONA IN DARING ASSAULT

ATHENS, Jan. 7.—(AP)—The Greek ministry of marine announced tonight that a squadron of Greek destroyers had penetrated the Gulf of Valona, Albania, and shelled the Italian-held town with 40 rounds of ammunition. No Italian craft were sighted, the announcement said.

The action occurred Sunday night.

ATHENS, Jan. 7.—(AP)—The Greeks reported new gains today both in the coastal sector and north of Kila and said the Italian hold in the Tepeleni-Kila area of Albania was weakening.

An advance northeast of Chiraka, forces from the front said, threaten to cut the Italian communications between Tepeleni and Kila. The Greek navy major objective in southeastern Albania, they said.

North of Kila, they said, capture of a 3,500-foot height gave them a vantage point from which to shell a large Italian force in the rear of the Italian line. The peak is under a shortage of Italian troops. They said the Italian force is putting up stout resistance.

When You Reach Out For Butter
Remember Story of War Inflation
Is Right There Under Your Knife

By GRANT DEXTER
Edmonton Bulletin Exclusive
O you reach out to help yourself to the butter, remember that the story of war inflation—the story of all the problems facing us as the consumers of Canada—is right there under your knife.

You paid three cents per pound for that butter that you would have done a few days ago because the War Prices and Trade Board issued a decree on December 24, 1940, that the price of butter should be fixed at the level of December 12. And the Wartime Prices and Trade Board did this because the price of butter had fallen so low that it was threatening the production of butter from September onwards to be under ten million pounds.

Italians Abandon Airport As British Capture 40 Planes

Mechanized and Armored Force Is Rushing Westward For Major Attack—Now In Contact With Outer Defences

CAIRO, Egypt, Jan. 7.—(AP)—A Royal Air Force communiqué announced today that British troops thrusting deep into Libya had reached El Adem, the airport for Tobruk, and there captured 40 Italian planes which had been damaged by previous British bomb attacks. The Italians had abandoned the airport.

By FREDERICK KUH

LONDON, Jan. 7.—(BUP)—British military authorities announced today that British mechanized forces were now in contact with the outer defenses of Tobruk, Italy's important naval and air base in Libya, 80 miles west of Bardia.

A new British army was reported speeding across the Libyan desert for a full scale attack on Tobruk to reorganize the battered Italian African army could effect a reorganization after its defeat at Bardia.

Dispositions from Egypt indicated that the British had moved cars and Bren gun carriers were racing westward along the coastal highway while an entire new Empire force was cutting in to ward the road from the west coast of Bardia.

PREMIER KING LAUDS POLICY OF ROOSEVELT

Congress Message Will Enlighten Dictators Says Prime Minister

OTTAWA, Jan. 7.—(CP)—Prime Minister Mackenzie King said Monday night the "force of freedom" have had no support of comparable strength, magnitude and durability to the speech made Monday by President Roosevelt to Congress at Washington.

Mr. King in a statement described the President's message as "downright, direct and decisive."

"If aggressive nations were ever in doubt, they know now where the United States stands and the lengths to which that country is prepared to go in its determination to thwart their ambitions," he said.

REALITY TESTS

Text of Mr. King's statement: Of the many remarkable speeches delivered by Mr. Roosevelt in the years of his presidency, his message to Congress Monday will, I believe, be viewed as the most important of his great career.

No one who listened to the President or has read the message, can doubt that Mr. Roosevelt realizes that civilization itself is at stake in the struggle now being waged with the forces of tyranny. Nor can anyone doubt the President's determination to have the United States afford all possible aid in defending freedom and democracy.

The warm response accorded the President's message by Congress was no less gratifying than the words of the message itself.

DIRECT AND DECISIVE

The message was downright, direct and decisive. If aggressive nations were ever in doubt, they now know where the United States stands and the lengths to which that country is prepared to go in its determination to thwart their ambitions.

The full significance of the President's message is to be found in its concluding words: "There can be no end save victory." From beginning to close, his words were a declaration of that conviction. It sets forth the imperative need of us viewing the conflict as the means by which certain victory is to be achieved.

The outbreak of war the forces of freedom have had no support of comparable strength, magnitude and durability.

Message Will Bring Strength And Courage

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—(CP)—The New York Herald Tribune, commenting today upon President Roosevelt's message to Congress, said the president "Makes it clear that this country has nothing to hope for from a victorious Germany—whether in respect to its liberties or its business."

Noting Mr. Roosevelt's "audacious words" to the democracies—"We shall and you shall see increasing numbers, ships, planes, tanks, guns." This is our purpose and our pledge," the Herald Tribune added.

"If only the country could be as enthusiastic with respect to the president's declaration of the practical and moral duty to achieve victory, as it is certain to be with respect to his statement of the ideal behind that hope."

The Times said the president's words "will ring around the world" and "wherever they are heard by men of goodwill will bring forth strength and added courage."

LONDON, Jan. 7.—(CP)—Official circles in London Monday night termed President Roosevelt's message to Congress "a new and masterly presentation of the world situation."

"The most interesting speech is being studied with the greatest possible appreciation," it was said.

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—(AP)—A 10-minute summary of President Roosevelt's message to the United States Congress was broadcast in German to Germany by the British radio Monday afternoon. It was heard by the Columbia Broadcasting System here.

Little Comment In Germany On Message

BERLIN, Jan. 7.—(AP)—German's first news of President Roosevelt's message to the United States Congress was a 200-word summary carried by R.N.R. German news and propaganda agency, which called it a New Year's communication in connection with the opening of Congress.

Authorized commentators were silent, however, indicating the German reaction would be given only after most careful study of the message in the highest quarters.

D.N.B. said the message conforming to Mr. Roosevelt's "well known attitude in international affairs." The agency emphasized Mr. Roosevelt's recommendations that war materials be made available to the democracies without the immediate thought of payments. It also emphasized his contention that such a policy would not be an act of war.

Planes Collide

KEMPVILLE, Ont. Jan. 7.—(CP)—A mid-air collision between two Royal Canadian Air Force training planes near here forced one to make a forced landing in a field, but the other returned to the Ottawa base. Neither pilot was hurt. A third plane, trying to land near the crippled machine, some time later, was slightly damaged but was reported and returned to its base.

MacKinnon Plans Call Meeting On Wheat Situation

OTTAWA, Jan. 7.—(CP)—A wheat conference will be called by Trade Minister MacKinnon to meet, probably in Winnipeg, shortly after the dominion-provincial conference which opens here next week has concluded, it was learned Monday. Object of the conference will be to discuss plans for handling the wheat crop particularly the matter of increased storage facilities and the suggestions for reduction in the wheat acreage.

Sound Effects

MANCHESTER—(CP)—Bar plans for all the people of Manchester—a pair of nearly three-quarter of a million persons—were distributed through the warren system of the city's A.R.P.

The conference will be open to all interested parties, according to reports, including members of the wheat board, the wheat advisory board and provincial representatives.

GANNAT, France, Jan. 7.—(AP)—A foreign Legion cavalry captain, Gaston Robert, 48, court-martialed on a charge of pro-British activity, was acquitted Monday in the Palace of Justice here.

and the fact that when he was accused he surrendered voluntarily. Capt. Robert specifically had been accused of "serving a foreign army by trying to recruit French military from the crew of a French submarine in the case of that foreign nation" in Egypt, Malta and Tunisia.

DRUMHELLER, Jan. 7.—(CP)—Fire gutted the waiting rooms of the Canadian National Railway station at Wayne Monday morning and did extensive damage to the rest of the building and equipment. Loss is set at over $1,000.

The flames were brought under control by two men, which were used to pump water, and by the Drumheller fire brigade. A crew is immediately starting reconstruction.

The Applause In Congress

The key-note of President Roosevelt's message to Congress yesterday, the 100th anniversary of the Union was that, for the first time in its history, the existence of the United States is endangered and threatened. In these circumstances, he said, it became the course of enlightened self-interest to support those countries whose victory would remove that menace and whose downfall would expose this continent to attack by the combined resources of men and materials of Europe, Asia, and Japan.

This support, in the shape of "ships, tanks, planes and guns," must be given in the maximum amount consistent with the timing of the United States. It must be given free from any demand that these supplies be paid for cash or down by the loading of 10,000,000 tons of cotton and will not toll the nations now in actual war with aggressor nations "they must surrender, merely because of present inability to pay for the weapons which we know they must have."

This forthright call to the political consciousness of Congress was matched by the thunderous applause which greeted it. It is of even more immediate practical importance than the President's admirable presentation of the situation. The world has known what Mr. Roosevelt thought and proposed. The applause clearly means that Congress thinks with him and will implement the proposal.

How Many Planes?

The vice-president of the Curtiss-Wright Corporation has given out some figures as to airplanes "in being" and in prospect. The Axis powers, he says, now have 40,000 war planes, Britain 25,000, the United States 6,000. By mid-summer he thinks the figures will be 40,000 for the Axis, Britain 32,000, the United States 10,000. He thinks that the Axis should have 40,000, Britain 40,000 and the United States 10,000. By the end of 1942, he thinks, the standing should be, Axis 40,000, Britain 50,000, the United States 40,000.

If the figures suggest Britain is still heavily out-numbered, the "big" points out that during September, the Axis had three planes for one, and predicts they will not do better than lose two for one. In that case, Britain 25,000 planes now, the Axis 6,000. By mid-summer he thinks the figures will be 40,000 for the Axis, Britain 32,000, the United States 10,000. He thinks that the Axis should have 40,000, Britain 40,000 and the United States 10,000. By the end of 1942, he thinks, the standing should be, Axis 40,000, Britain 50,000, the United States 40,000.

There is a suggestion in the recent trend of the air war that the British authorities are of the same mind. The showing of London with further reinforcements, answered by a three-night attack on Bremen that must have left that city little better than an area of ashes and debris. This response in kind was hardly less than a rejoinder in such emphatic terms that Britain's directors of the air war had not felt they have enough planes and are in prospect to keep up the pace indefinitely.

Spahis In Action

Five French forces are included in the British-African army in Libya, in numbers large enough that they operate as distinctive units. They are comprised of the Spahis, a far westward beyond Barba, and the road between that point and Tobruk, thus reducing the only route by which the defenders could be retailed in their comrades.

The interesting note is added in the announcement from General De Gaulle's headquarters, that the Spahis have been fighting in the Sudan, and have given a good account of themselves in various encounters. The Spahis are now noteworthy because the Spahis do not live in the Sudan or in other British territory. They are native cavalry troops recruited in the French colonies of Algeria and Tunisia—the part of French Africa which Signor Mussolini in the most positive passages of his balcony speeches said he was going to obtain whether by negotiation or force. The Spahis, it seems, have their own idea about the desirability of being added to the Italian army.

These organized French colonial troops can only have left French territory because General Weyland allowed them to go or because he could not prevent them from. In either case, they are fighting to keep the French position in North Africa and keep the French Empire from falling into the hands of De Gaulle's headquarters. They are doing this with the consent of General Weyland, their action is as significant as their fighting quality is in hand and in prospect.

Wavell "Beat Them To It"

General Wavell evidently decided he could not afford to wait until diminished supplies and weakening morale should reduce the garrison of Malta to helplessness and despair. With German forces on the way to bolster Italian reinforcements in the Mediterranean area, time became important. Their arrival on the scene would mean harder fighting and heavier casualties. So an assault was ordered and the place taken, with captures with losses which are said to be light.

In capture depicts the Nazi aid of any urgent reason to operate in that locality. They are too late to do anything but Fascist have for an attack or threatened attack on Egypt. All that is left for them is to try to assist Graziani, dug in at Tobruk.

with perhaps 160,000 of the 250,000 men he commanded a month ago.

That the German high command will think it worth while to sacrifice men and machines in large numbers in an attempt to push the part of the Italian desert to the Duce is purely political. And the amount of assistance that could be given Graziani by air is equally so. The Marshal has lost the initiative, and there is no probability he can or could regain it. He is 80 miles from the Egyptian border, his troops far less equipped for field operations than they were four weeks ago. He is on the defensive, and in a position where the defence can only be maintained if supplies can be smuggled through the blockade from Italy.

What Herr Goering is no doubt asking himself is whether it would be worth the cost in pilots and planes to help hold a few miles of rocks and sand around Tobruk, just to save Mussolini's tottering prestige. There isn't much else to save in Libya.

One newspaper in Rome managed to blurt out the truth in advance, when it predicted the fall of Bardia would be "a sad piece of news for the Axis," Mussolini himself must be slipping.

A two-day, blizzard blocked Salsola highways, in places leaving only the tops of stalled automobiles protruding. If the argument is sound that plenty of snow will make it impossible for the Italian farmers in the dry belt should be cheered by the crop outlook.

The Moscow radio calls attention to the "growing inability" of Japan's militaristic regime, faced by multiplying troubles abroad and serious economic and political at home. The significance is not that the world is told of these conditions, of which it was already aware, but that Moscow should be able to say that Japan has failed to succeed in making Stalin and the Japanese expansionists eye to eye, but a few days ago he said he had all but secured it.

Japan announces an experiment in hog-breeding. One hundred young Japanese couples were selected today for a subsidized marriage plan to encourage earlier marriages and larger families.

The welfare ministry offers to advance each of the couples a loan of from $70 to $100.

Months, no interest will be charged. The principal is to be reduced 20 per cent with each of the first four children.

This is a delightful commentary on the logic of the totalitarian states.

First they complain they are over-populated and over-crowded. Then they conquer land conquered for breathing-space for their dense populations.

Germany has gone through the same sort of thing. It has been doing it for a decade or more.

What these nations really want is not breathing-space but more land.

Pilchards, another low form of life, was found to be more plentiful than the fish.

President Roosevelt's message to Congress yesterday fulfilled all the high promise of his radio address a week ago Sunday night.

Note that the word "ships" for on its inclusion in the Roosevelt plan will probably depend American participation in the war.

It was the systematic destruction of American ships that drew the United States into the war. It will probably be the destruction of American ships that will bring the United States into this one.

But whatever the implications of this inclusion, the President appeared to have come into the area with him.

His speech was cheered and cheered again by senators and representatives. If the Americans face war, they are facing it with good heart and mounting courage.

Meantime, the solidity of congressional support behind the President was manifest in other ways.

The long-time rivalry between Senators Barkley and Harrison was quieted in harmony when the matter of senate leadership and temporary senatorial presidency came up.

Personal feuds for many years, Barkley and Harrison placed each other's names in nomination for these two important posts.

Barkley and Harrison contested for the leadership in 1937 when Barkley won by a single vote. Barkley's nomination was made by Senator Charles McNary, another opponent rival for political honors.

Harrison's nomination was seconded by Senator Bilbo, long a personal political enemy of Barkley.

All caucus actions were by unanimous vote. It was a touching love-fest inspired by a common purpose to back Roosevelt to the limit.

The power of the President's leadership was clearly demonstrated in the Senate.

From The News

By Harold L. Weir

Italy is finished in Africa. Bardia is gloriously taken and British troops are on their way to Tobruk. To miles further west along the North African coast.

It has been alleged in Italian despatches that the defense of Bardia was only a device to enable Graziani's men to move completely to Tobruk and that the real stand will be made in the last place.

That may or may not be true. But if Tobruk were ten times as strong as the Italians can make it, it would still fail to the British.

The advancing British forces have no serious physical impediment. Even more irresistible is the moral momentum they have acquired in the consistent defeat of the enemy.

Something like 70,000 Italians have been captured. The Germans are not trying. They have no stomach for the fight.

This latter fact is interesting in view of the story spread over Hitler's plan to occupy Bulgaria tomorrow.

The most common guess in explanation of this move is that Hitler intends to support Italy in her struggle against Britain in Africa and Greece in Albania.

If Hitler's troops enter Italy at all, it will not be to help Mussolini against Britain and Greece, but to aid Mussolini against the enraged and humiliated Italian people.

Hitler does not care much what kind of a beating Italy takes in Africa. He could not afford to calmly watch rebellion follow his fellow dictator from power. When the people and their elected leader fall, all dictators feel the jolt.

By far the best guess about Hitler's projected move into Bulgaria has nothing to do with Italy at all.

A clash is imminent, many feel, between Germany and Russia. What is planning to be the decisive move on one side or the other.

Hitler may be brooding of a sudden seizure of the rich wheat lands of the Ukraine. Stalin may be brooding of a play-alike at the Balkans much like the seizure of his saunter into Poland in 1939.

The fact that the Soviet ministers to Bulgaria, Yugoslavia, Rumania and Hungary have been recalled to Moscow for a conference indicates that something portentous is afoot behind the bustling bow of Comrade Joe.

Japan announces an experiment in hog-breeding. One hundred young Japanese couples were selected today for a subsidized marriage plan to encourage earlier marriages and larger families.

Shin Bone Grafted In Wrist Gives Shute New Golf Punch

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 7.—(AP)—Literally speaking, golf master Denny Shute is kicking the ball around on a comeback to links fame. The two-time winner of the Professional Golf Association championship, beset by hard luck and two operations in 1940, is driving the ball with the aid of a "new right wrist" in which a piece of his own shin bone, about the size and shape of a silver dollar, was grafted.

Kept out of action for six months by the wrist operation last year, the Cleveland-born professional got back on his game by misadventure. First, to qualify with a 36-hole score of 101 for the P.G.A. tour.

"But I seemed as though Denny wasn't supposed to play in that tournament," his wife said Monday. "Because the night he qualified he had an appendicitis attack."

The year before, you remember, he tried to keep Denny out of the P.G.A. championship because his wife said he was a day late.

At that time the P.G.A. front office banned Denny from playing, and then yielded, when Shute's fellow pro threatened a "strike" if he wasn't permitted to compete.

Denny was just about to tee off in the final round of the Los Angeles Open when Mrs. Shute, who was watching her husband's golf career, was relieved of the new year.

His emotional reaction was to put him toward the top and he went into the final round of the tournament, a bare two strokes off the pace.

Shute ran into hard luck in the last round coming out with a 74 for a total 75-hole score of 286, six strokes behind Johnny Blyden, who won the tournament.

ALICE MARBLE BEATS HARDWICK IN PRO DEBUT

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—(AP)—

Alice Marble is embarked on her career as a junior professional with the launching of a financial as well as athletic success, but for her "black-nite" fight with Bill Tilden last night, the fellow who draws him, Queen Alice got involved in the fight-for-pay game last night in Madison Square Garden by downing Mary Hardwick, Redgate's best, 8-6, 8-6, despite rapid crowd and record of 12,371 who contributed to a gross of $25,000.

But while the customers applauded politely, and cheered, Tilden, who is right on the court, and Miss Hardwick made the first start of a four which will take them to more than 50 United States and Canadian cities, and for which "Queen Alice" will have $25,000 "per day," the galleries were "all out" as big bill took the court and threw a 6-4, 6-3 decision to Redgate.

Don Butler in the companion fence, was right on the court, as Bill and Alice came through 6-5, 5-4 in the mixed doubles.

They whistled and cheered as the "Old Man" Butler of the set game made a good shot and they applauded with "hot-lashes" and "hot-lashes" as he just missed.

They lived his antics on the court, and Butler, who is right on the court, and Queen Alice probably can draw a share of the customers through the sale, and Butler's blazing power also will attract a few, it is felt.

But, particularly, the fact that the last link between the "golden" and the fresh 40s traveling with it.
